It was launched amidst much fanfare. It was also printed in Gujarati, Hindi, Tamil and English languages. This book has been written by the Gandhian Bengali writer Apj Abdul Kalam, who is better known as Mahatma Gandhi. The book came out in 1939 which tells stories of the Indian independence movement and the plight of Indians since the 16th century. The book was written for young readers to teach them about India's struggle for independence through an allegorical story about a flower named Agni Pankh (Fire Pearl). It consists of 32 stories which tell the history of India from ancient times to Independence 1947. The book describes his four vows: Truth, Non-violence, Love and Sacrifice. Agnipankh Book was written by APJ Abdul Kalam as a children's novel. It has been translated into Indian languages such as Gujarati, Hindi and Tamil as well as many others. It is a great source of inspiration for those who want to read about the country's fight for independence and the bravery of those who fought for their country's freedom. This book finds Agnipankh (a fire pearl) in an abandoned temple and finds another pearl named Satheesheen (sincerity) nearby. They become friends and together meet another pearl named Narendra (wisdom). They also meet another pearl named Karmveer (village worker). Soon the guru of these pearls, Bharat Dada (meaning leader of India) comes to visit on his royal horse. Bharat Dada is the first pearl that Agnipankh, Satheesheen and Narendra meet on their journey. He teaches them about their purpose in life and how to be the best they can be. Bharat Dada tells them how he had once been a part of an Indian kingdom called Magadh but after hearing of truth, non-violence, sacrifice and love from Gautam Buddha he left for Australia where he started an Indian community. Guru Bharat Dada gives Agnipankh, Satheesheen and Narendra their first test. For some unknown reason, he asks them to be back by dusk the next day. They are disappointed but they have no choice so they go home for the night. The next day, the pearls are back on their way to Bharat Dada's kingdom. They happen to meet a tiger which tries to attack him but is then scared away by Narndar who shouts at him. The tiger then comes running towards Agnipankh who is unable to defend himself because of his small size.
